

Deadlines, Disputes and Donkeys. Can conflict in project teams really be constructive or should it be avoided at all costs?

Can conflict in project teams really be constructive or should it be avoided at all costs? One should fight fire with water. Of course! But in a highly charged and pressurized project environment we very often fight fire with more fire. Disagreements flare up into arguments and then arguments explode into conflicts. Everyone loses in this situation. Join Tremaine in another lively, thought provoking talk that delivers the secrets of constructive conflicts along with practical tools to diffuse destructive flare ups, deal with donkeys and wield your emotional smarts to create an environment of constructive conflict.

Tremaine du Preez

Tremaine is head of learning and development at the Leadership Consultancy, an author and leadership coach. She spent 10 years working and training in large, multinational financial services firms before embarking on a journey to understand the tao of transformational management.

Tremaine has an MSc in Financial Economics from the University of London. She has authored and co-authored four books – most of them on her favorite topic of critical thinking. She is a former MBA professor of critical thinking and a professional member of Asia Professional Speakers - Singapore. She is known as being a lively speaker on serious subjects.

www.leadershipconsultancy.org

