Synopsis:

Managing in the Evolving Digital Transformation Landscape - the Differentiating Competencies of the Project Managers

With the accelerating growth of new technologies, digital adoption and ever increasing regulatory requirements happening across all spectrums of industries, Organisations are expecting to rollout differentiating customer solutions at shorter and shorter time possible. Traditional project management methodology, in-house application development, on premise infrastructure provisioning are becoming the things of the past. To adapt and operate in the new operating environment, project managers need to be equipped with new competencies. What are these critical differentiating competencies?
